Chambers UK Top Silk Bar 100

In December 2013, Michael was ranked as one of Chambers UK’s Top Silk Bar 100, in their inaugural listing of the top barristers practising at the Bar of England & Wales. “He fights his client's corner hard and with all his vast experience at hand,” …. “he is also frank in his assessment and utterly practical in his advice.”

Who's Who Legal 2018 notes that "Michael Beloff QC stands out as 'one of the greats' in sports law. He enjoys an excellent reputation for his vast experience before courts and tribunals."

In 2008 Lord Bingham described Michael (in the first Birkenhead lecture) as a ‘most accomplished and much sought after advocate’.

In 2012 Lord Justice Moses described him (in the 6th Ann Ebsworth Lecture) as "that pre-eminent advocate.”

In 2009 Michael was given a Lifetime Achievement Award at the annual Chambers Directory Bar Awards.

In 2014 Michael was nominated for the Bar’s pro bono award.

In 1991 Michael won the Women's Defence League award for his contribution to women's rights law

Among his many credits, Michael was described in Legal Business in 1994 as "the Bar's Renaissance Man", and in Chambers and Partners Directory 1996 as one of the top three stars of the Bar.

He was, while from 1996 President of Trinity College Oxford(see below) in part-time practice, but returned to full-time practice in 2006 until his retirement after 50 years in practice in 2017.

Michael was named as one of the top ten barristers of the decade by Legal Business in 1999, one of the top ten currently in practice in "The Independent on Sunday" in 2001 and one of six barristers in the Times List of the 100 Most Influential Lawyers in Great Britain in 2008 and 2010. He was The Times "Lawyer of the Week" in November 1999.

In the citation for his Honorary Degree at the Open University (2018) written by Professor Simon Lee, Michael Beloff QC was referred to as "one of the leading lawyers of the twentieth and twenty-first centuries", having "written more than most legal academics while appearing day after day in leading cases" and "single-handedly" acting as "the founder...of sports law." "In an era where sport is one of the world's biggest industries, Michael Beloff is the biggest character".

Michael Beloff KC made his final appearance before the English Courts in November 2018. The Lord Justice presiding commented that "it has been not merely an honour, but also a pleasure to be addressed by you in your last case", whilst the opposing Counsel added "on behalf of the Bar, that Mr Beloff is one of the very most highly regarded members of our profession, and not only for his erudition, but also for his charm and kindness". This was reported in a Times Law Diary piece, which closed with "[h]is international career with the Court of Arbitration for Sport will continue. Finished? I suspect that he has hardly begun."

Michael continues to practise law from Blackstone Chambers as an arbitrator and advisor.
